THE ECONOMY OF INDO-CHINA

creased medical care. In 1924 sanitary control was given to doctors of the Institut Pasteur to conduct research on malaria.
Companies, in order to decrease coolie mortality, were willing to finance these efforts.
Safe drinMng-water, enforced vaccination, copious distribution of quinine, and plentiful supplies of drugs were part of the new regula-the new regula- tions. The Bernard Commission in 1925 had studied improvement of plantation infirmaries. These medical requirements cost the companies an additional 140 to 258 francs per coolie, and naturally the planters resented what they termed excessive coddling. The government felt that it was not over-paternalistic in a country given to swift and fatal epidemics, and it had the satisfaction of having its work enthusiastically approved in 1927 by a delegate from the League of Nations. The experiments made on the Michelin plantation at Thuan-loi, in 1929, 1 11 1 11 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 1 proved that these expensive hygienic precautions were more than repaid more than repaid by increased production.
more than repaid
more than repaid by increased production. In preparation for his important edict of October 25, more than repaid by increased production. In preparation for his important edict of October 25, 1927, Varenne had long studied kbour problems. Although, in general, the partisan
more than repaid by increased production. In preparation for his important edict of October 25, 1927, Varenne had long studied kbour problems. Although, in general, the partisan of decentralization, he felt that a federal inspection of
more than repaid by increased production. In preparation for his important edict of October 25, 1927, Varenne had long studied kbour problems. Although, in general, the partisan of decentralization, he felt that a federal inspection of labour could cope
more than repaid by increased production. In preparation for his important edict of October 25, 1927, Varenne had long studied kbour problems. Although, in general, the partisan of decentralization, he felt that a federal inspection of labour could cope far better with the increasingly difficult situation than
more than repaid by increased production. In preparation for his important edict of October 25, 1927, Varenne had long studied kbour problems. Although, in general, the partisan of decentralization, he felt that a federal inspection of labour could cope far better with the increasingly difficult situation than the old local
more than repaid by increased production. In preparation for his important edict of October 25, 1927, Varenne had long studied kbour problems. Although, in general, the partisan of decentralization, he felt that a federal inspection of labour could cope far better with the increasingly difficult situation than the old local inspectors, because it involved more than one country.
more than repaid by increased production. In preparation for his important edict of October 25, 1927, Varenne had long studied kbour problems. Although, in general, the partisan of decentralization, he felt that a federal inspection of labour could cope far better with the increasingly difficult situation than the old local inspectors, because it involved more than one country. These officials
more than repaid by increased production. In preparation for his important edict of October 25, 1927, Varenne had long studied kbour problems. Although, in general, the partisan of decentralization, he felt that a federal inspection of labour could cope far better with the increasingly difficult situation than the old local inspectors, because it involved more than one country. These officials were to be chosen from among the civil service, and in some
more than repaid by increased production. In preparation for his important edict of October 25, 1927, Varenne had long studied kbour problems. Although, in general, the partisan of decentralization, he felt that a federal inspection of labour could cope far better with the increasingly difficult situation than the old local inspectors, because it involved more than one country. These officials were to be chosen from among the civil service, and in some provinces this resulted in a mixed political and labour control.
more than repaid by increased production. In preparation for his important edict of October 25, 1927, Varenne had long studied kbour problems. Although, in general, the partisan of decentralization, he felt that a federal inspection of labour could cope far better with the increasingly difficult situation than the old local inspectors, because it involved more than one country. These officials were to be chosen from among the civil service, and in some provinces this resulted in a mixed political and labour control. Some
more than repaid by increased production. In preparation for his important edict of October 25, 1927, Varenne had long studied kbour problems. Although, in general, the partisan of decentralization, he felt that a federal inspection of labour could cope far better with the increasingly difficult situation than the old local inspectors, because it involved more than one country. These officials were to be chosen from among the civil service, and in some provinces this resulted in a mixed political and labour control. Some planters refused to let their property be inspected, and accused
more than repaid by increased production. In preparation for his important edict of October 25, 1927, Varenne had long studied kbour problems. Although, in general, the partisan of decentralization, he felt that a federal inspection of labour could cope far better with the increasingly difficult situation than the old local inspectors, because it involved more than one country. These officials were to be chosen from among the civil service, and in some provinces this resulted in a mixed political and labour control. Some planters refused to let their property be inspected, and accused the officials of
more than repaid by increased production. In preparation for his important edict of October 25, 1927, Varenne had long studied kbour problems. Although, in general, the partisan of decentralization, he felt that a federal inspection of labour could cope far better with the increasingly difficult situation than the old local inspectors, because it involved more than one country. These officials were to be chosen from among the civil service, and in some provinces this resulted in a mixed political and labour control. Some planters refused to let their property be inspected, and accused the officials of giving political considerations an exaggerated primacy.
more than repaid by increased production. In preparation for his important edict of October 25, 1927, Varenne had long studied kbour problems. Although, in general, the partisan of decentralization, he felt that a federal inspection of labour could cope far better with the increasingly difficult situation than the old local inspectors, because it involved more than one country. These officials were to be chosen from among the civil service, and in some provinces this resulted in a mixed political and labour control. Some planters refused to let their property be inspected, and accused the officials of
more than repaid by increased production. In preparation for his important edict of October 25, 1927, Varenne had long studied kbour problems. Although, in general, the partisan of decentralization, he felt that a federal inspection of labour could cope far better with the increasingly difficult situation than the old local inspectors, because it involved more than one country. These officials were to be chosen from among the civil service, and in some provinces this resulted in a mixed political and labour control. Some planters refused to let their property be inspected, and accused the officials of giving political considerations an exaggerated primacy. Varenne was not discouraged, and further worried planters by increasing control of
more than repaid by increased production. In preparation for his important edict of October 25, 1927, Varenne had long studied kbour problems. Although, in general, the partisan of decentralization, he felt that a federal inspection of labour could cope far better with the increasingly difficult situation than the old local inspectors, because it involved more than one country. These officials were to be chosen from among the civil service, and in some provinces this resulted in a mixed political and labour control. Some planters refused to let their property be inspected, and accused the officials of giving political considerations an exaggerated primacy. Varenne was not discouraged, and further worried planters by

poioting to the local 3 per coot growth of the population, alky to SO as their worries lest all the labour be drained to the for South. As the bia companies, this was the period of the rubber boom, characterized the lush growth of speculation. These mushroom concerns often exploited their stockholders before their concessions, naturally and were less considerate of their employees than of those who entrusted to them their savings.

Varoane worked out accident and sickness insurance when he down the principle of limited working hours. He instituted most cessfully a system of workers* savings, as a way of keeping least: at nucleus of their wages from being dissipated. Guarantees housing, as to lodging, and salaries were also reinforced. Varenne left Ijado-CMna Wore lie could complete this work, but his projects were taken up by Ifesquier. He malaria experimentation of the Pastetr Institute proved